STEPS TO BECOMING A FOREIGN SERVICE SPECIALIST

The Foreign Service Specialist selection process begins with an application, proceeds through the selection process, and for those who succeed, culminates in hiring from the register for assignment to an orientation course that marks the beginning of every Foreign Service career.

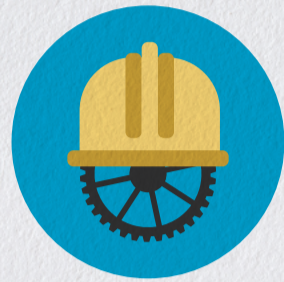

STEP 1: CHOOSE A SPECIALIZATION

The U.S. Department of State offers career opportunities to professionals in specialized functions around the world. As a Foreign Service Specialist, you will provide important technical, management, healthcare or administrative services at one of over 270 posts overseas, in Washington, D.C., or elsewhere in the United States.

STEP 3: QUALIFICATIONS EVALUATION PANEL

Once you have completed the initial review stage, your application will go before the Qualifications Evaluation Panel (QEP). If you meet the minimum qualifications, the QEP will evaluate your professional experience, job history, and motivation in more detail.

STEP 4: TAKE THE FOREIGN SERVICE OFFICER ASSESSMENT ?

Candidates forwarded by the qualification process will engage in an officer assessment test that consists of a writing exercise, a structured interview, and an exit interview to determine whether they demonstrate the 12 Dimensions that are essential to the successful performance of Foreign Service work.

STEP 6: SUITABILITY REVIEW PANEL ?

Upon completion of the background investigation, the candidate's information will go before a Suitability Review Panel to determine if they are suitable for a Foreign Service career.

STEP 7: REGISTER OF CLEARED CANDIDATES

Candidates who have received a conditional offer of employment and who have successfully completed the previous stages will be placed on the Register in their specialty, and rank ordered by their overall assessment scores, including language bonuses/veterans' preference points.
